SATTIN KANCHIVARAM SILK

Satin silk is a form of silk fabric that is characterized by its glossy surface and smooth texture. The glossy surface is created by a special type of weave, which uses floating threads on the surface of the fabric. These floating threads reflect light in a way that gives the fabric its characteristic sheen.

The smooth texture is created by a combination of the high-quality silkworms used to make the fabric, and the way the fabric is woven. Satin silk is typically made from long-staple silk fibers, which are silk threads that are longer than the average silk fiber. This results in a fabric that is smooth and silky to the touch.
